The Green Hat

The Green Hat

"The Green Hat" was a runaway bestseller from its publication in the fall of 1924 through the rest of the decade. The story revolves around Iris Storm, a wild young widow with a shady past and a taste for fast men and even faster cars. Set mostly in London's Mayfair district at the start of 1920s with capriciously wild adventures through Europe, Iris is at the center of this whirlwind-but driving her is the ghost of her first husband, the ferociously idealistic Boy Fenwick, who may have fallen, dead drunk, or may have jumped from his hotel window on his wedding night. According to Iris, Boy Fenwick died "for purity," and Iris' rampages through Europe's high society thereafter leave no doubt about what he meant by "purity." What Iris implied by it - and wanted to keep secret - is revealed only in the final eye-popping pages.
