The Billionaire's Mail Order Bride

Victoria Manning simply didn't need men. She liked them as friends or family members; but, in the house, getting in the way, tracking mud on the good carpet. No. Emphatically not. She read an offer in the newspaper offering a position as a wife with exactly the description of marriage she wanted.

Nathan Burdette didn't want a wife. The Millionaire ran his life as he wished. He didn't have time or desire to give a woman the kind of attention she wanted. However, he didn't have a choice. Not if he wanted the gold mine his father left him. The will said he must marry and produce an heir within a year. It couldn't be broken.

Victoria answered the ad. Nathan was pleased. She was pretty and independent and wanted to raise a child. Victoria liked the look of her soon-to-be husband. Nathan was tall, handsome and independent.

After a stop at the Justice of the Peace, they stood in their hotel room, looking at the bed in front of them, frozen with fear.

Double Dragon

Shae is the typical type A personality that can be found at most colleges around the country. She had a plan that did not involve much else than her studies and the many jobs needed to cover rising tuition hikes. Her life was busy and full, but there was something missing that she did not even know she needed.

Caspian was different, his search was specific and he knew exactly what he was looking for. He was looking for his mate, to be shared with his other dragonkin partner. He sat perched on a hillside because an old woman had promised him that his long wait was over. When he hears a scream, he knows that the woman who needs saving, is the one he has spent a decade waiting for.

Shae feels an instant connection to her savior and things get hot between the two of them almost immediately. It is only when Cass starts talking of a third and dragons that she realizes that she is way in over her head. Will Shae be able to handle the new twist life has given her or will she yearn for the driven life that she was used to? Can she really let go?

Hardcore

Messy Jessie had been a chubby, gangly tomboy in school, but since then she had come a long way to get it together. She found a great job in the mayor's office, and after 10 years she is finally going back to where she came from, to show them that she was now Jessica, and in charge. What she didn't count on was running into Randall Blakemore, who hadn't changed a bit. Still in trouble, and still in charge she finds herself falling into old habits. Will she be able to step into her new life, even if it means going head on with Blakemore, or will the two find themselves finding common ground before they both lose it all?
