This work primarily supports the truth of Christianity by examining correlations among theology, science, and philosophy. 2500 years ago, science was barely in existence and non-distinguishable from philosophy. It probably would not have seemed strange in that day if someone had postulated that everything that is originated in the abstract. It certainly does to us, but the Prime Mover must be an abstraction because only abstractions do not need creation in order to be.  $2 = 2 = 4$  regardless of whether anyone says so or not, and the same goes for, "Love is a good thing." Consider a hunk of wood. It is composed of atoms that contain so much more space than substance that we can hardly comprehend it, and these atoms have in their nuclei protons that consist so much more of space than they do of substance that one may compare the volume of a house vs. that of our solar system in characterizing them. Then, when we examine the substance of which I speak, we find that the best we can do with regard to its composition is to say that it is energy. Now, we do not know what energy is, though we do know that it moves and heats in accordance with mathematical equations. Thus, matter reduces to math, an abstraction. I have said that abstractions are autonomous, but we know they can also proceed from minds. If both of these observations are true, is it possible that mind can emanate from abstraction? Well, mind IS an abstraction; therefore, it may not have to proceed from anything in order to be. We would seem to be at this point close to the mechanism of the origin of God. In this book, I claim to get closer. Let us now move on from the connection of philosophy with religion to the connection of science with theology. Sir Arthur Eddington, associate of Einstein, and Sir James Jeans, associate of Hubble, concluded, in the late 1920's that (in Eddington's words) "The stuff of the universe is mind-stuff." By this, they meant that all we perceive is thought, probably that of a Being of stupendous magnitude and mathematical ability. Something like a half century later, John Archibald Wheeler, mentor of Richard Feynman and other famous theoretical physicists, stated that the universe is information, and it would appear that all information proceeds from an informer. We can support Eddington's and Jeans's contention by examining a premise of quantum physics called quantum observation. Now, we know that elemental particles of matter and force have dual existences in that they may be waves at one moment and quanta, tiny packets, at another. Physicists have also shown in the laboratory that, the more elemental particles e.g. photons are observed, the more they exist as quanta, and, the less they are observed, the more they exist as waves. Now, the phenomenon of quantum observation extends into the macroscopic world such that quantum physicists believe that nothing exists until it is observed. This suggests that the creation of matter has a two-fold nature, wherein potential, virtual reality, appears first and is subsequently actualized by observation. (This probably refers to force as well since, at least according to string theory, the two are, on the quantum level, virtually indistinguishable from one another.) Since we require mind for observation, we must conclude that, in the absence of any other cognitive mind, that of God serves as the Observer. There is in my book a wonderful limerick that illustrates this situation. Finally, we move to the book of Genesis and find that it shows God creating in just this manner as He first thinks, "Let there be...." and follows this by observing that His creation is good. (It is good because it is derived from The Truth, which I define as everything that is good and which I tout in my book as the Arche', the counterpart of God, and, with God, the ultimate origin of everything that is.) Thus do I exemplify the connections I make in this writing among science, philosophy, and Christian theology.

Robert Gibson:

In this 21st one hundred year, people become competitive in each way. By being competitive right now, people have do something to make these survives, being in the middle of the particular crowded place and notice by means of surrounding. One thing that occasionally many people have underestimated the idea for a while is reading. Yes, by reading a guide your ability to survive boost then having chance to remain than other is high. For you who want to start reading some sort of book, we give you that The Physics and Philosophy of the Bible: How Relativity, Quantum Physics, Plato, and History Meld with Biblical Theology to Show That God Exists and ... Forever (The Inevitable Truth) (Volume 1) book as beginning and daily reading publication. Why, because this book is usually more than just a book.

Mary Moore:

This book untitled The Physics and Philosophy of the Bible: How Relativity, Quantum Physics, Plato, and History Meld with Biblical Theology to Show That God Exists and ... Forever (The Inevitable Truth) (Volume 1) to be one of several books this best seller in this year, that's because when you read this book you can get a lot of benefit on it. You will easily to buy this kind of book in the book retail store or you can order it by using online. The publisher in this book sells the e-book too.
