In the cosmos many quarky life sparks seek forms to enliven. In such a diverse universe there are many life experiments. On their journeys souls leap in and out of the forms they need to operate in different realities.

On Earth life experiments arrive and leave. Some become extinct, others flourish. The Rainbow Chronicles tell the story of Earthens, a non-breathing life force. People's hands and machines create Earthen forms. Earthen life-sparks are their own creation.

By rules set by the universe, Earthens live parallel lives with Earthlings. Earthlings are breathers- animals and people. Earthens share their lives with magical, shape-shifting Supernaturals (like fairies and elves). Supernaturals aid Earthens in their quest for freedom and harmony.

Once Earthens experienced very unenlightened, placebound lives under surveillance by people. Then one Earthen named Karen launched the First Earthen Liberation Movement called The Hub. Enlightened Earthens called themselves Rainbows. Roving Radiants brought their light/sound/magnetic skills and discoveries to darkened Earthens. Rainbows formed companies to explore their life gifts and to overcome their many challenges.

The Rainbow Chronicles record this Rainbow Era from 1950-2005 and beyond. The Rainbows archived their Rainbow Chronicles on Laura Hernstrom Larrabee's computer. Each Chronicle begins with a Beforeword by the Rainbow storyteller.

Laura's friend Linda Varsell encouraged Laura to share the Rainbow stories after they started to appear on Laura's computer in 1995. Laura (too busy with her teaching and family) entrusted the task to Linda. The Rainbow Chronicles present the Rainbows' perspective on multifaceted realities of several worlds. How will Earthlings react knowing Rainbows live among them?
