Does parenthood take first place over your marriage? Do you feel like you are losing the passion that made your relationship great?

Is the loss of passion something you are worried about? Do you want to recapture that wonderful time before you had children?

Imagine how great it would be if you could turn back time and your relationship felt the way it did before you had kids; that's a nice thought, right? Passion, love, time spent together – these are things that typically get overlooked in favor of the children. But what if I told you that you could get that passion back and keep it, even with kids? Would that spark your interest? Then let me tell you that it is entirely possible for you and your partner to have a hot, passionate marriage, even if you are parents. Parenthood does not exclude passion, and the lost intimacy can be rebuilt and regained. Believe it or not, you can go back to the close and loving relationship you used to have before the kids appeared in the picture. Remember what it was like as a young, passionate couple? Go back to that! You can start working towards reigniting the flame of passion right NOW!

Do you want your marriage to feel like it did in the beginning? Well, it can! The passion you once shared with your spouse is not gone; it's just hibernating while you focus on your other responsibilities, like children. Release yourself from this self-imposed emotional prison – motherhood and fatherhood are both compatible with passion. Your deep feelings can be found once again, and the flame that was once between you can be reignited and kept alive. Do you know how? It's easier than you thought. I wrote this book based on my own experience with a marriage that had lost its passion, upon the arrival of my children. As a result, the relationship had become lackluster, but I refused to accept defeat. As it turns out, the passion was still there, all along and I was able to bring it back through a series of tips that helped me and my partner go back to being lovers, as well as parents.
