Maximizing Your Studio's Potential: Instructor's Manual--Brass Julie Patton

This Instructor's Manual: Brass, a guide to the Student Log Book: Brass, was also pilot tested at the University of Arizona. It provides a combination of tools centered around skill assessment, goal-setting and resume building. After students complete their subjective skill assessment in their Student Log Book: Brass, instructors can then objectively test students' measurable skills* using the tests in the Instructor's Manual: Brass. Next they set semester goals, and check skills off throughout their degree program. 52 weekly skill-based lesson logs, along with charts and graphs help students understand their strengths and weaknesses while managing progress and providing motivation toward semester goals. This ultimate set of organizational lesson textbooks is highly flexible for any teaching style and the Log Books are undated, so you can begin at any time. Designed as a studio textbook for the college-level brass student, though it could also be utilized by high school brass students. *Instructor must have access to the Arban or Kopprasch books in order to utilize the Measurable Skills Tests.
